SPIRIT WARRIOR – SHARON HARRIS

Eight years ago, Sharon Harris was ready to focus on her next career move. She used the standard goal setting, but wasn't coming up with the industry, job title or company that felt right. She realized that she needed to focus on the "feelings" of the new job. She used the statement, "In my new job, I am _____." She focused on what she felt when she filled that statement out.

She also attended a feng shui class. After looking at the Bagua Map, she realized that her career area was right at her front door...a door that she never used. For the next two weeks, she parked in front of her house and used the front door.

Her dream job literally found her. The lobbyist for the organization called her and asked her to apply. She saw the ad posted in an association trade publication and the Denver Post. Out of a field of 67 candidates, she was chosen. She increased her salary dramatically. Everything that she described has happened. This year, her board of directors and committee members threw a surprise birthday party for her. At that moment, she remembered one of her statements, "In my new job, I am appreciated." Through her focused efforts, her spirit truly found its home.
